

Bioenergetic Testing

Contract for Services

MSAS bioenergetic testing is a Class II device regulated by the FDA to test energy resistance. This electrodermal skin testing enables the practitioner to gather information about the body to better assist with nutritional consulting. Testing results are not diagnostic and patients need to follow up with their doctor for any concerns or health issues. Recommendations are nutritionally based to better assist in product selection.

Your MSAS practitioner will not provide a diagnosis but will gather information by submitting the body to electrical stimuli and evaluate its response.
